

Livia D'Angelo

Since the early beginning of my career I turned my research interest into welfare-related issues, including husbandry, and neurobiology of laboratory fish. I'm currently Associate Professor at the Veterinary School at the University of Naples Federico II (Italy) where I run the fish facility. My daily efforts are addressed to enhance the translatability and reproducibility of fish models derived data in neuroscience.